Pl. V,2 Khirbet Iskander, Area C2, to East showing gateroom with bench lining gateway.

Pl. VI, 1: View of Tell el-Hayyat looking east.

Pl. VI, 2: Top View of kiln in Area A, Phase 5 (Locus A 043).

Pl. VII, 1: Side view of kiln wall in Area A, Phase 5 (Locus A 043).

Pl. VII, 2: Mudbrick wall (Locus F 026) in Area F, Phase 4.

Pl. VIII, 1: Cobbled surface (Locus 041) in Area F, Phase 4.

Pl. VIII 2: Wall (Locus C 021) and associated tabun (Locus C 026) in Area C, Phase 3.

Pl. IX, 1: Bonded stone walls (Loci F 006 and F 008) in Area F, Phase 2.

Pl. IX, 2: Early Bronze IV/Middle Bronze I Pottery from Phases 1-5.

Pl. X: Middle Bronze II decorated pottery from Phases 3-5.

Pl. XII,2: Rujm al-Henu from the southeast with Jebel al-Hawayah in the background. Rujm al-Henu (E) is on the right, Rujm al-Henu (W) on the left.

Pl. XIII,1: Rujm al-Henu (E) as seen from Rujm al-Henu (W), in the foreground. The three openings in the western wall of the eastern building may be original entrances.

Pl. XIII,2: Rujm al-Henu (E), Area III.0 (incorrectly labelled III.1 on photo board). Part of the clay layer Locus III.0.6 still remains between the exterior walls (Locus III.0.3) and a bedrock hollow Locus III.0.7). (Photo by N.Hartmann.)

Pl. XIV,1: Rujm al-Henu (E), Area III.1. The northern section (cf. Fig. 5) is visible, and a possible east-west wall (Locus III.1.9) borders the trench on the south. (Photo by N. Hartmann.)

Pl. XIV,2: Rujm al-Henu (E), Area III.23. Pile of boulders and cobbles (Locus III.23.2) covers a burial pit (Locus III.23.5, 7-10). Southern walls of central room and outer structure appear in the background. (Photo by N. Hartmann.)

Pl. XV,1: Rujm al-Henu (E), Area III.23. Partial remains of an articulated neonate in Locus III.23.7. (Photo by N. Hartmann.)

Pl. XV,2: Rujm al-Henu (E), Area III.23. In this final view, the bedrock hollow, which contained an adult male, and the western section (cf. Fig. 5) are visible. (Photo by N. Hartmann.)

Pl. XVI,1: Rujm al-Henu (E), Area III.32. Clay layer (Loci III.32.5,8) with concentration of cobbles around the periphery as seen from the northeast. (Photo by N. Hartmann.)

Pl. XVI,2: Rujm al-Henu (E), Area III.32. View of north face of east-west wall (Locus III.32.9), secondarily built over cobbles and clay (Locus III.32.5). (Photo by N. Hartmann).

Pl. XVII,1: Rujm al-Henu (W) as seen from Rujm al-Henu (E). The absence of stones at three equidistant points in the eastern wall suggest entrances that would face those of Rujm al-Henu (E). Hirbet Umm ad-Dananir on the northwestern flank of Jebel al-Qesir is visible in the distance at the center of the photograph.

Pl. XVII,2: Soundings on the interior of western wall of Rujm al-Henu(W). The enclosure wall curves to meet the circular tower above on the western side of Area IV.1. Area IV.3 is in the foreground; note the accumulated rockfall, the ashlar which define the doorway, and the floor level of the structure in front of the doorway. (Photo by N. Hartmann.)

Pl. XVIII,1: Rujm al-Henu (W), Area IV.1 Articulated adult in burial pit (Locus IV.1.8) alongside the circular tower. Bones of an earlier burial can be seen behind the skull of the upper body. (Photo by N. Hartmann.)

Pl. XVIII,2: Perennial Spring of 'ain Umm ad-Dananir from the southeast. Note the extensive erosion of the limestone/sandstone bedding planes, and the accumulation of boulders at the base of the cliff.

Pl. XIX,1: Hirbet Umm ad-Dananir looking northwest with the Wadi Umm ad-Dananir in the background. In the 1981 season, the outlines of a large building, probably dating to Early Roman III (ca. 4 B.C.-A.D. 73), appeared immediately below the surface as seen here; it was built over Iron IIC/P and Late Bronze II structures.

Pl. XIX,2: Aerial view of Qasr type structures at Hirbet Mudmar, from the east. (Photo by N. Hartmann.)

Pl. XX,1: Rujm al-Hawi, looking west, with its circular tower incorporated into the western wall.

Pl. XX,2: Square tower of Rujm a-Hawi. Rujm al-Henu is seen to the northwest at the center of the photograph.

Pl. XXI,1: Resistivity survey at Rujm al-Henu (E) in progress.
